I remembered her last words—'II thou love thy mother, do thy dury!' I aubmitted. A little after, I heard that she was dead. Oh! then my senses forsook me; at any risk t determined to travel to the country. Whence proceeded as ardent, so impetuous a desire to see once more a place where my mother had just died ? will tell you; and as you have a mother, and as she loves you, and as you love her, you will understand me.

"We peasants of Moyan are a simple and confiding race. We have not received the instruction, nor attained the knowledge that they have in the cities, but we have our beliefs, which the townsfolk call superstition. What matters the name? Be they superstitions or builefs, we have them, and these world be the most that could and ofever would be the man that could uproot them. Now, one of these beliefs to which we cling the most, is that which attributes to the first flower that blows in the grave mould such a virtue that he who gathers it is certain of never forgett ng the gathers it is certain of never forgett ng the dead, and of never being forgotten by them. Belief, how dear how sweet! With it, death has no terrois, for death, without forgetting, or being forgotten, is but a sweet sleep, but calm repose after a long trial. That flower—I panted to see it bud—I panted to gather it! I abandond my post and went on my way. After ten days of long and weary march, I reached my mother's grave. The earth seemed yet fresh—no thower appeared. I waited.—Six weeks slopsed, and then one lovely morning I saw a little blue flower—"forget me not." As I plucked it I shed glad tears, for methicoght that little flower was my mother's soul; that she had felt that I was near, and that, under the form of that slie had given herself to my heart once more.

"There was nothing now to detain me "There was nothing now to detain me in the country, for my father had soon followed my mother to the grave, and I had plucked my precious flower; what more did I want remembered my mother's charge-"10 thy duty? The total White population of the Slave States is 6,184,477; 2 Free Colored, 228,188 Slave, 33,200,364.
Thus it will be seen that the entire White population of the South are only about two to one to the colored; and when we consider the fact that the slaveholding population number only about half a million, the odds are still more striking in favor of the blacks.

movement by the slaves, the number y non-slaveholding whites to be depended upon in sid of the slave power is excaedingly uncortain, as the sentiment with this class of people in many of the slave states is largely against negre slavery and in favor of free white labor, dictated by motives of policy. It is not to be supposed that these would put their lives in much jeopardy in defence of an institution obnoxious to their interests and opposed to the better feelings of their natures. In short, it has long been conceded, at the South as well as at the North, that the " peculiar institution" of the former is only maintained by the strength of the Federal

Nor need it be supposed that the slaves are ignorant of the course matters are taking at the South, and of the Seconsion project that is being urged forward by the fire-eaters. Their cars have been open while it has been discussed by their masters in their places of business and on the street corners, and their tongues have been ready to communicate the information gained to bale follow bondmen:
